NEW CITY JAIL WILL HAVE "BRIDGE OF SIGHS" AFTER ITS RENOVATION

The old county jail, bought by the city for $25,000, will be renovated in the near future, at a cost of about $5000, and converted into the city jail and corporation court building. County authorities were preparing to formally transfer the building Wednesday.

Mayor Charles Davis and the aldermen had already examined the building and decided on the improvements, which will consist of a new entrance, a new court and an assembly room. These will form an addition to be built in the southeast corner of the jail, and connected with the main building by a "bridge of sighs."

The plans are being prepared as hurriedly as possible and emergency bids will be received this afternoon to be opened Thursday at noon.
